College Honors Alumnus of the Year, Livesay Winners

Millsaps College honored Dr. Hiram Polk as the 2005 Alumnus of the Year in recognition of his outstanding contributions to and leadership in his profession as a surgeon and an academic.

In his acceptance speech, Polk said: "Higher education is under more pressure now than it has ever been in my lifetime. It is under pressure for funding everywhere. But special little private colleges like Millsaps, which are bastions of excellence, will go on no matter what. I think we should leave here tonight knowing that what we have here is special and precious and is worth preserving for the future."

A native of Jackson, Polk was educated in its public school system and graduated from Millsaps in 1956. Polk attended Harvard Medical School and completed his internship and residency at Barnes Hospital/Washington University in St. Louis. His initial faculty appointment was at the University of Miami in Florida as an assistant professor of surgery with interest in infection, burns, cancer, and pediatric surgery.

Polk assumed the chair of surgery at the University of Louisville in 1971 and has served in this position since that time. Polk is the current president of the American Surgical Association and is the recipient of the distinguished Honorary Fellowship of the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh.

The College also bestowed the prestigious Livesay Award upon four distinguished individuals, Dr. John Wofford, Colonel Kenneth and Mrs. Rosemary McRae, and Mark Herbert. Along with Polk, they were honored at the 2005 College Awards and Recognition Dinner, held in March in the Leggett Center.

Wofford graduated cum laude in 1950 and attended Thomas Jefferson University Medical College in Philadelphia, where he earned a medical degree in 1954. He completed both his internship and residency in Memphis, and after serving as senior medical resident at the University Medical Center in Jackson, he worked as the Millsaps College physician from 1958 to 1962. He has been affiliated with several medical facilities in Mississippi, namely UMC, where he was a member of the attending medical staff until his retirement in 1991 and served as clinical associate professor until 2004. In 1974, he was named Doctor of the Year by the Mississippi Association of Medical Assistants.

Ken and Rosemary McRae have shown great commitment to the Millsaps community for the past several years through their tireless service to the Parents Council. The couple, who live in Birmingham, have served on the council since spring 2002 and led the organization as co-presidents in 2002–03. Parents Council Director Kay Barksdale commended the McRaes for their loyal service to the College, saying Ken and Rosemary were always on campus a day early to handle details and preparations for council events. "We have so many loyal parents, and the McRaes have really set the standard for service to Millsaps," Barksdale said. "They have been involved in their son's activities on campus—from Chamber Singers to chili cook-offs—and have worked with our student life staff in addition to their many responsibilities on the Parents Council."

Herbert has practiced law in Jackson for 26 years and is currently a partner in the firm of Watkins Ludlam Winter & Stennis, where he specializes in construction litigation. In 1984, he was named Outstanding Young Lawyer by the Mississippi State Bar Association; he has also received the association's Award of Merit. Herbert has served on the Mississippi Bar Foundation's board of trustees and as that organization's president in 1995. He was named the first president of the newly formed Millsaps College Alumni Association in the fall of 2003. —J. Y.

A Marriage Made In Millsaps Heaven

She was student body president and a computer buff by trade. He was an athlete and the voice of the Millsaps Majors. Never was there a couple with more school pride. After graduation, she left to engineer software in Silicon Valley and he went off to study law in the Grove. Life and distance separated them for a few years. But now, these two college sweethearts have found each other again, promising to stay together forever in true Millsaps fashion.

April Slayden, B.S. 2001, and Jeff Mitchell, B.A. 2001, are planning their

New Year's Eve wedding, but it is Mitchell's proposal that is so unique to their collegiate heritage. Mitchell surprised Slayden with a spontaneous trip to Millsaps on November 24, 2004, when he brought her to the legendary M-Bench. The stone seat is fabled for its ability to assure marriage and eternal love with a kiss. Seated under a requisite full moon at a makeshift table adorned with Champagne, chocolate, and pictures from their Millsaps years, Mitchell asked Slayden to marry him.

Slayden now lives near San Francisco and has worked for Hewlett-Packard as a software engineer and researcher since completing graduate school in Rochester, New York. However, it's not all bits and bytes for the bride to be.

She has helped design an innovative music device known as the DJammer for HP Labs. HP and MTV have a global alliance, and Slayden, along with professional DJ Gavin O'Connor, demonstrated the DJammer at an HP event that coincided with the MTV Music Awards. The demonstration was such a success that they were both invited to demonstrate the DJammer again at pop mogul P. Diddy's after-show party.

Since completing the M.B.A. program at Millsaps in 2003 while also serving as the college's sports information director, Mitchell has been pursuing a law degree at the University of Mississippi. Now in his third year, he also acts as a media-relations assistant in the Ole Miss athletic department, as well as using that familiar voice to announce Rebel baseball, basketball, volleyball, and football games. Following his graduation from law school in December and their Madison nuptials, Mitchell plans to join Slayden in California to continue his career in sports management. —B. D.

Campus Leader As Leading Man

Hollywood has a way of preparing its residents to be catapulted from the stage and screen into the world of politics; recent governors and a former commander-in-chief come to mind. However, it has worked the other way around for Paul Gagliano, B.A. 2002, and Millsaps seems destined to have a former president become a familiar face in entertainment.

Gagliano served as student body president for the 2001–02 term at Millsaps and was known for his energetic speeches and notable presence. "I have always felt comfortable in the public eye, whether in an elected position or as a character on film or in front of an audience," said Gagliano, a native of Birmingham.

Even while carrying out the extensive duties of heading the student government, he starred in countless theatrical productions, even directing a few.

Gagliano said he was inspired and motivated by his directors at Millsaps, including Brent Lefavor, associate professor, and Morgan Gadd, a former theatre professor.

They gave him the skills and assurance to make the leap to La-La Land following graduation, as he moved out to Burbank to pursue his dreams. Working as a bartender and waiter by day, Gagliano has used his time to perfect his craft. "Right now, my life is like that of any actor getting started," he said. "I go to auditions. I go to workshops. I take classes. I go to networking events. I book a job here and there. I anticipate the next gig. The process repeats."

It seems the process is working, as Gagliano's résumé has become increasingly impressive, the most notable addition being his recent work on the History Channel series Breaking Vegas, starring as the lead in the episode "Card Count King." Gagliano will also be appearing in an advertisement for Diet Pepsi that will run in several newspapers and magazines, including Entertainment Weekly, US, and People. —B. D.

Location, Location, Location . . .

John Johnston, B.B.A. 1989, worked as a location manager for several films (Pulp Fiction, Volcano, The Rising Place, and others) before being given the pilot script of the Fox drama series 24 four years ago. Now as the Emmy Award-winning thriller enters its fifth season, Johnston is still finding sites that form the backdrop for suspense sequences. Johnston and his crew scour downtown Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley for houses, streets, alleys and other urban fixtures. After finding a site and getting approval from the producers, Johnston makes contact with the owners and works with 24's legal and risk management departments to ensure that the site is available when the film crew is ready to shoot. "A lot of times, it comes down to simply being able to bargain with people," Johnston said. Johnston and his location partner won Location Professional of the Year/Television honors at the 2004 On Location Awards this past October.

Rose M. Hurder, B.A. 2003, of Cleveland, Miss., is coordinator of the Lighthouse Arts and Heritage After-School Program in Cleveland. The program, which meets four days a week and is based at D. M. Smith Middle School, emphasizes the rich culture of the Mississippi Delta while also providing academic support for the students. Activities have included reading the play A Raisin in the Sun, writing blues songs, and traveling to the Mississippi River Museum in Tunica. Students also produced a "photo roadshow," for which they gathered historic photos of the Delta and students interviewed the photographers to gather the pictures' oral histories. This project was made possible through a $10,000 grant from The History Channel. Hurder has been working with the program as part of her year of service with Americorps VISTA, which ends in July.

William W. Selman, B.S. 2003, of Hattiesburg is pursuing a master's degree in the Biological Sciences Department at The University of Southern Mississippi. His current focus is herpetology and his ongoing research is entitled "Steroid Hormone Levels and Reproduction of Yellow Blotched Sawback Turtles (Graptemys flavimaculata) and the Congeneric Ringed Sawback Turtle (Graptemys oculifera)."
